Course Program

The fundamental role of an effective board is to work with management to identify and define the organization's purpose and mission, and then to devise business & ESG strategies and objectives that deliver performance and sustainable long-term success. Growth and Purpose are indeed interdependent. A key component of a board's performance effectiveness is its ability to govern effectively, which has become increasingly dependent on its capacity to support sustainability through adopting corporate governance practices, in these times of great change and uncertainty.

Against this backdrop, forward-looking boards are constantly reviewing and, where necessary, adapting their governance structures and processes to embrace the latest global Corporate Governance practices for board effectiveness, Corporate Governance excellence, and wider value creation.

The local laws & regulations, the local Code, proxy advisors, rating agencies, investor stewardships, and global best practices highlight the importance of annual Board performance reviews - regular assessments of the efficiency, effectiveness, and suitability of Boards and directors in order to identify:

- strengths and improvement needs for future Board work, and,
- the critical skills, according to the organization's current business model and long-term strategy, that are well represented in the Board, which require further enhancement or need to be acquired.
